

Aviation

Portland flights from Boeing Field

SeaPort Airlines said it will start daily scheduled flights from Boeing Field in Seattle to Portland International Airport on June 30.

The carrier's parent company also runs Wings of Alaska, which has flown scheduled routes between Juneau, Alaska, and four outlying communities since 1983, said CEO Kent Craford.

SeaPort plans eight daily round trips on weekdays, and four each on Saturday and Sunday. Fares start at $149 for a one-way restricted fare.

Craford said the airline will fly nine-passenger, Swiss-built Pilatus PC-12s, pressurized turboprops that more typically are used in corporate aviation. And unlike some airlines, it isn't charging $15 for the first piece of checked baggage.

Compiled from Seattle Times business staff